Wendy Franklund is a National Per Diem with Big Ideas Learning. She travels all over the United States visiting schools and introducing Big Ideas Learning products, while creating and nurturing relationships with principals, teachers, district employees, and support staff.

During her time as an educator, Wendy taught both middle and high school at Harrison School District in Colorado. While at the high school, she served as Department Chair where she designed curriculum, expanded programs, and provided support to her team. She eventually moved into a district position where she designed curriculum maps, created district standards tests, and piloted an alternative GED program for at-risk youth within the district.

Prior to Big Ideas Learning, Wendy served as a Regional Consultant for Houghton Mifflin Harcourt where she traveled to various states to provide individual and team coaching to teachers using AGA programs to ensure fidelity, support instruction, and differentiation.

Wendy holds a Bachelor of Science in Secondary Education from Arizona State University. She received her Master of Education in Curriculum and Instruction with an emphasis in Science from the University of Colorado.
